

Some astrological cultures revere the combination of two or more star signs - their alignment can symbolize the coming of an event based on their joint interpretation or an entirely new meaning based on the re-interpretation of their combined geometry.

There have been cultures across Vaelorys and the many Planes of existence where Combinational Astrology has guided their social structure, politics, agriculture, and even cultish behaviour. Throughout history, those of less reverential natures have pondered if there is true power behind these phenomena or if it is pure coincidence or external interference that has enabled and continued such reverence. Even for some of the most legendary mages, controlling the stars has often been considered a feat beyond Mortal capabilities - at least through Arcane methods.

Imagine diagram of a vaguely feline constellation - labelled 'Pride' - and a constellation resembling a dagger - labelled 'Betrayal' - aligning...

In the diagram above - it could be seen that the constellations of Pride and Betrayal have aligned. There have been some scholars in this field that suggest this indicates a time of consequence and punishment for past-arrogance, whilst others have suggested that together they look more like a serpent or a mythological creature. It is unclear from our research what this alternative interpretation could mean however...
